2. Information about stocks and associated risks

Investments in stocks are usually associated with certain risks. Identification, analysis, forecasting of risks and assessment of their impact on the investor's financial position will enable the investor to adopt effective investment decisions based on risk/reward ratio for each particular investment.

Consequently, in any case, along with reading the Prospectus carefully, investors are advised to thoroughly analyze the risks associated with investments in the Issuer's stocks before making an investment decision. The following risks are considered as major risks associated with investments in the Issuer's stocks. They are divided into two major groups: risks associated with the Issuer's business and risks associated with investments in the Issuer's stocks.

2.1. Risks associated with the Issuer's activities

A detailed description of the risks associated with the Issuer is presented in clause 3.2 of the Prospectus.

Competitive risk. There is competition in the telecommunications market where the Issuer operates and it may intensify from time to time, impacting negatively the Company's operational and/or financial indicators.

Capital expenditures and working capital costs. The Company's business is costly in nature, and in order to maintain and/or further improve its competitive position, the Company makes significant investments in capital and working capital.

Economic, political and social risks. Success of the company and of the competitors and the sector in general is closely related to the general economic developments in Armenia. Deterioration of the economic situation in Armenia may have a negative impact on the paying capacity and consumption patterns of customers.

Currency risk. Most of the company's capital investments, as well as the sale of particular services (roaming, international calls, international channels, etc.) and wholesale trade of Internet, are carried out in foreign currency, so the Issuer faces also foreign currency risks associated with possible exchange rate fluctuations.

Risk of decrease in demand. The demand for telecommunication services in Armenia has a significant impact on the activities of the Issuer and competitors.

Risk of customer churn. Churn is peculiar to the mobile and fixed communication sectors, which, among other factors, is conditioned by a high level of competition.

Litigation. The Company is involved in several legal proceedings (specified in clause 3.17.3 of the Prospectus), and considering it, adoption and enforcement of adverse rulings for the Company may have a material adverse affect on the Issuer's financial indicators and operations.

2.2. Risks associated with investments in the Issuer's stocks

A detailed description of the risks associated with the Issuer is presented in clause 2.1 of the Prospectus.

Interest rate risk. Interest rate fluctuations may cause the investors to revise the rate of return expected from the Issuer's stocks.

Market risk. The price of the Issuer's stocks and their demand on secondary market (in the long or short run) may fall due to current economic indicators and their anticipated changes on internal and international markets.

Credit/default risk. When purchasing stocks investors assume the Issuer's credit risk associated with possible deterioration of Issuer's financial position in future, impossibility to fulfill the obligations and the Issuer's probable bankruptcy.

Risks associated with listing. The Issuer will apply to Armenia Securities Exchange OJSC (hereinafter "the Securities Exchange") in order to list and/or allow trading of the stocks. If the stocks are not allowed to trade, the placement will be deemed canceled, whereafter the Company will buy back the placed stocks.

Liquidity risk. The Issuer will engage market maker(s) to ensure the liquidity of the stocks in the secondary market. However, the Issuer cannot guarantee that investors will be able to sell or buy the stocks on the secondary market at a favorable price and volume at any time throughout the period they are traded on the market.

Differences in the voting rights assigned to the stockholders. Holders of Class "A" stocks offered under the Prospectus have lower voting rights than holders of Class "B" stocks. Following the offering, Team CJSC, the holder of the Company's Class "B" stocks, will retain a majority interest and continue to have significant influence over the Company.

Exercising the rights arising from the stocks. Investors should take into account that the rights arising from the stocks can be exercised only after registration of the charter reflecting the change in the share capital of the Issuer by the State Register of Legal Entities.

Dividend payment restrictions. Payment of dividends by the Company will depend on a number of factors, such as, for example, the level of net profit (retained earnings), revenues and profitability, debt to equity ratio, restrictions applied to payment of dividends under applicable laws and loan agreements and other factors. If no dividends are paid in the future, capital gain (if any) caused by the price of the stocks will be the only source of income for investors.
